Excerpt: . . . street, and the brave little woman remembered with a shiver two or three turns in the road, where a skilful short out might head her off. She fancied, too, that the last snowball had come nearer than usual, --and--O were those her own home sleigh bells jingling up to meet her! V Sure enough, there came Farmer Graves dashing along in his little cutter, most utterly and totally astonished to see his wife running at that pace along the road. Why, Lizzy! he said, why, Lizzy --O Ahab, drive fast! cried his wife, tumbling herself into the sleigh, she didn't know how. I want the doctor-- and he's after me! and Mrs. Graves broke down in a genuine fit of hysterics. Well I vow, if I know which way to drive! said the astonished farmer, giving his horse however a stroke, which--in the mystified...
