Language: English Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from The Stiff Lip: A Novel Both hands outspread against the window-pane, Booker looked out through the aviary into the garden which now lay placid and sodden under the obstinate spring rain. She swung towards and away from the glass where she could see, softened and dim, the hard lines of her countenance, now more, then less distinct. Like somebody else, thought Booker, and then: Makes company. Mrs Headcorn s maid was rather sad. She hated the country, which sounded so nice in serials, but in fact seemed to be inhabited solely by bare-branched trees, twisted by the wind into the likeness of heads of hair, as of distracted women screaming in the blast; the country meant mud over the instep; it meant an awful shopless, bus-less, movie-less world. Beyond the window-pane, in their little gallery, some melancholy cockatoos sat frozen and misornithic. The flocculent heads and ruffs sank disagreeably into their shrinking white and yellow shoulders. They sat at equal distances upon their perches, their wrinkled eyelids low, their beaks buried for warmth into their breasts. Their mangers were almost full. They were too cold and wretched to eat. Booker had offered them bits of apple that morning, thus endeavouring to promote conviviality, but they cared for nothing. Booker understood them. She gave a heavy sigh.
